Radar trap shows up on 'Good Morning America'

By Martin Richter
Staff writer

As Sgt. Dave Jung of the Illinois State Police trained a radar gun on Interstate 64 motorists near Fairview Heights on Monday, a television cameraman was going on a TV camera on Jung.

Jung, who was taking radar while concealed behind an Illinois Department of Transportation truck fitted with a snowplow, appeared live on ABC's "Good Morning America" to talk about the covert speeding details the State Police have been running in this area for the past four months.

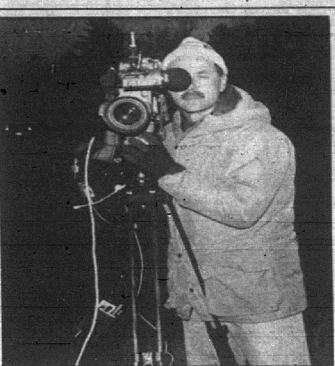

Jung did a two-minute spot from the radar trap, which was just west of Illinois 158.

"Good Morning America" aired locally on KTVI, Channel 2, a "Skybeam 2" truck owned by the station was used to feed a picture and sound to the network show.

While running radar from an IDOT snowplow may seem pretty sneaky to some motorists, the State Police obviously aren't going out of their way to be secretive.

In fact, the local covert speeding details have been featured in "USA Today" and other newspapers around the country after the story made a national news wire service.

"I feel that the more the public knows that we're doing these things in these types of vehicles, the more voluntary compliance

KTVI cameraman Tom Heyse trains a television camera on Sgt. Dave Jung.

"We'll have with the speed limit," Jung said after his appearance on the show.

"If the public has the conception that anytime they see an IDOT vehicle, it could be radar, it could make things safer for a lot of people, including IDOT workers."

In the past four months, Jung and other troopers have run radar from an old pickup truck, a grass-mowing tractor, and a cherry-picker.

Jung said State Police used covert speeding operations regularly 15 or 20 years ago, and recently revived the practice.

"Now we're faced with the same thing we were back then — poor compliance — in addition to radar detectors, light-flashing and CB radios. If people are going to use those measures to violate, then we will use these methods in an attempt to enforce."

Jung promised that the State Police will continue the covert speeding details.

"My next idea — this will not be until spring, when the leaves are on the trees — I think I'll just dress like a deer hunter in 'camos' with face paint, and sit in my deer stand with a radar gun. 'Why not?' Jung said with a grin. "Trooper in a tree — it's got a nice ring to it."

Magnesium firm seeking bond issue

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

Plans to issue $6.1 million in bonds to build a new magnesium processing facility here have been given preliminary approval.

Mary Kane, executive director of the Southwestern Illinois Development Authority, said the approval was given by the SWIDA board Dec. 19 to Spectrulte Consortium Inc. of Madison.

She said the approval means the board has examined the proposed project and is willing to attest to the good faith and intent of the company.

"We consider this a very important project," Kane said. "There are about 450 people employed (at Spectrulte), so it is important to the region economically."

"And magnesium is one of the critical future elements. It is important to the region that (Spectrulte) be able to upgrade their quality and become more competitive."

William Barnes, chief executive officer of Spectrulte, said the project involves an upgrade of the existing facility and replacing old magnesium smelting technology with new technology.

The higher efficiency and cost savings associated with the new process will enable us to remain competitive," Barnes said. "It will mean saving 100 jobs that would be eliminated without it. So, it's very important to us."

Barnes said Spectrulte is the only U.S. source for the kind of magnesium products it produces for auto makers and other industries.

Without the upgrade at Spectrulte, Barnes said, American industries would have to rely on foreign producers of magnesium products.

SWIDA and Spectrulte are now working together to prepare the necessary paperwork for a "Moral Obligation Enhancement," Kane said.

Kane said that means the SWIDA board would file a request with the state that the state make a "moral obligation" to (See BONDS, Page 2A)

Man charged in Huck's robbery

A 29-year-old Venice man has been charged with armed robbery in connection with the early-morning robbery of a Granite City convenience store Monday.

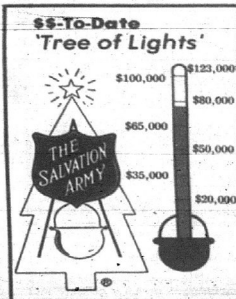

Richard Darrell Caudill of the 500 block of Fillmore Street in Venice was charged with robbing the Huck's store, 2430 Pontoon Road, in a warrant issued Monday by the Madison County State's Attorney.

Bond for Caudill was set at $75,000. Granite City Police reported responding at 12:39 a.m. Monday to an armed robbery in progress at the Huck's store, 2430 Pontoon Road. At the scene, police were told the suspect, later identified as Caudill, was armed with a handgun.

Pontoon Beach OKs restaurant sales tax rebate

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

A sales tax rebate promised in 1990 to David M. Thebeau, owner of Ralph and Charlie's Steakhouse Inc., will be forthcoming.

The Pontoon Beach Village Board of Trustees adopted a resolution Thursday approving a schedule of payments based on sales made at the restaurant, located at 4020 Pontoon Road.

A verbal agreement followed by letter of intent to rebate a portion of the village's share of the sales taxes was approved by the trustees in 1990.

The agreement stated that if Ralph and Charlie's Steakhouse was established and continued to operate a restaurant at its present location, the village would rebate portions of the village's share of the sales taxes for a five-year period.

Thebeau opened Ralph and Charlie's Restaurant in the Oakmont Plaza Shopping Center in August 1990.

The business grossed approximately $1.2 million in its first year of operation through July 31, 1991, Village Clerk Mary Warren said.

Figuring 80 percent for the first year's rebate, the village owes Thebeau about $10,100, Warren said.

The resolution calls for rebated shares of 70 percent for the second year, or the period Aug. 1, 1991, through July 31, 1992, to be paid by Nov. 1, 1992; 60 percent for 1992-93; 50 percent for 1993-94; and 40 percent in the final year for Aug. 1, 1994, through July 31, 1995, to be paid in November 1995.

Prior to the resolution being adopted, Trustee Bob Douglas said the board had sought an ordinance or resolution several months ago. Board Attorney Keith Jensen apparently had not prepared the document, he said.

"We have no ordinance prepared and Thebeau is waiting for his money and we haven't the mechanism in place to pay this money," Douglas said.

Douglas said there was a letter of intent, but no ordinance. None of the trustees recalled a resolution or ordinance being introduced or any further action being taken.

"The way we did this, other businesses would have a right to come in and ask," Douglas said. "Why don't we get an attorney who will write it?"

Vadalabene sees more 'hard times'

By Nicole Vaughn

When the Illinois General Assembly convenes this month, there will be lots of discussion surrounding one topic — money.

"The number one issue is the current budget and next year's budget," said Sen. Sam Vadalabene, D-Edwardsville.

Vadalabene cited money as the root of several issues to be discussed, including property tax relief, health care, educational funding and ways to reduce state spending.

One way to reduce state spending would be to have the state Medicaid program taken over by the federal government, an issue Vadalabene said he has discussed with U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello.

Fire forces K mart to close doors early

Some after-Christmas shoppers were in for a disappointment Sunday at the Granite City K mart store.

A small fire at the store on Nameoki Road caused the store to close early on Sunday afternoon.

The Granite City Fire Department was called to the fire at 3:48 p.m.

The fire, which appeared to have started in a display of silk flowers, set off an emergency sprinkler head. No injuries were reported and the department did not have an estimate of damage on Monday.

The cause of the fire is still under investigation, but firefighters reported finding a cigarette butt among the silk flowers. Firefighters reported the loss was mostly water and smoke damage.

The store, which was evacuated during the fire, remained closed Sunday, but reopened Monday on its normal schedule.

Time to diet?

Experts warn against trying to lose too much too soon

By Randy Vaughn
Staff writer

The holidays have a substantial impact on the American diet, leading many in the United States looking at ways to take off what they added during the season.

Christmas cookies, candies, buffet spreads, egg nog and other assorted food and drinks add pounds to the body that take more time to take off than they did to put on.

But dietitians and exercise consultants say moderation and consistency are the key to dropping unwanted pounds gained during the holidays.

Clinical Dietitian Debbie Gillespie of Memorial Hospital in Belleville said that many who gained weight over the holidays take the wrong approach to losing weight. They want to improperly cut meals for about one week in order to drop weight more quickly.

"The problem with cutting meals is the body adapts too well," she said. "The metabolism slows down and the body goes into (a) starvation mode." She said liquid diets, which do not teach proper nutrition, are not a good quick fix for shedding the pounds.

Under these diets, there is a quick loss in water weight immediately, Gillespie said, but as the body comes close to its ideal weight, the weight loss process slows.

She said eating small meals in moderation throughout the day would be more healthy than cutting meals out completely and will keep the body from losing muscle weight as opposed to fat.

"Have a taste of what you want as opposed to a big meal," she said.

Police station damaged

A window in a holding room at the Granite City police headquarters reportedly was shattered by a man who was awaiting the arrival of a friend with bond money at 12:55 a.m. Dec. 22.

Richard P. Carr, 39, of the 3000 block of Dale Avenue was charged with criminal damage to property after he allegedly began hitting the glass and then started kicking the window with such force that he shattered it and kicked it out of the window frame, police said.

An officer was talking with a friend of Carr's when the incident occurred.

dill, had run south behind the building.

Granite City police and deputies from the Madison County Sheriff's Department began pursuit and surrounded Caudill in the 3000 block of Pontoon Road. He was reportedly captured at that point.

A woman working at Huck's told police the man whom she identified as Caudill had come into the store and handed her a note in a plastic bag and told her she had better read it.

The woman said she thought it was a joke until the man pulled out a knife. She said she then read the note — it said "Put all the money in the bag" — and opened the cash drawer.

When the drawer was opened, she said, the man reached across the counter and began pulling money from the drawer. She said he ordered her to lie on the floor, but she refused.

The woman said the man ordered her to lie on the floor several minutes, but she kept refusing and finally went over to a telephone where she started calling police.

At the time, she said, he was still removing money from the cash drawer.

Vadalabene

D-Belleville.

Vadalabene said the state is currently $603 million in debt, much of which will be paid by state providers. Most of those state payments are already three to five months late due to a lack of funding, Vadalabene said.

A federal health program would free up a lot of state funds that we could use to address some of these other issues," Vadalabene said.

Based on several proposals from Gov. Jim Edgar to cut state spending, "hard times are forthcoming" for those who need help most, Vadalabene said.

Edgar has proposed a $135 million cut in public aid and other welfare programs including Circuit Breaker, which assists the disadvantaged with utility bills.

"State agencies are going to be hit very hard," Vadalabene predicts.

Edgar is also proposing a furlough of all state employees for up to five days next year, Vadalabene said. The furlough would result in a $10 million savings for one day.

"It's going to be widely debated," Vadalabene said. "It hits me right between the eyes right now because it was not something that I was prepared to think about."

Vadalabene plans to argue against another of Edgar's proposals, which would eliminate the double payment that school districts receive in June.

They need that money when their fiscal year ends (in June)," Vadalabene said. "The state is already late in its school payments, and we need to address that."

But while he favors increased educational funding, Vadalabene said he does not want it to come from increased property taxes.

One proposal puts a 5 percent cap on property tax increases. Vadalabene also suggests that educational funds could come from an income tax increase of 1 percent for individuals and 1.5 percent for corporations, an issue Edgar wants on the November ballot, Vadalabene said.

The income tax increase would generate $1.6 billion in revenue, Vadalabene said.

"I strongly support spending for education but we cannot do it on property taxes," Vadalabene said. "Most of these people are retired or on fixed incomes and they can't pay it now."

Gillespie recommends the loss of 1 to 2 pounds per week as the most healthy weight-loss method.

"The biggest thing to watch out for is fat intake," she said. "The addition of lean meats and starches will cut down on fat and cholesterol."

She said 6 ounces per day of lean meat that is baked, broiled or grilled along with low-fat cheeses made with skim milk or less saturated margarine contribute to a healthy diet. Gillespie also recommended incorporating fruits and vegetables into

Rebate

"We already had an agreement with him (Thebeau)," Trustee Louis Whitsell reminded Douglas.

When a vote was called to adopt the resolution before the board, Douglas sought a motion to defer adoption. "Wait until we get an attorney to review this. His (Thebeau's) attorney drew it up."

Mr. Thebeau has submitted all his (financial) statements and papers to me," Warren advised the board.

Trustee Loren Madison asked whether the specific dates listed in the resolution were the same as agreed upon.

No one questioned the percentages contained in the resolution, as the amounts had been discussed prior to the original agreement being authorized.

"I think we can change the dates if we adopt it," said Whitsell, who made the motion to adopt.

The resolution was adopted by a 4-2 vote with Trustees Bob Abel, Irene Karlechik, Madison and Whitsell voting for the measure. Trustees Marvin Ribbing and Douglas voted "no."

In other business, Douglas asked for authority to purchase a new printer for the police department's 911 equipment.

"We've got a printer on the LEADS (law enforcement computer) that is skipping letters," Douglas said. Approval was given to spend up to $300 for a new printer.

Approval also was granted to construct a new Butler building just south of an address at 3874 Illinois.

The construction site is roughly three-quarters of an acre in size and lies behind Kelly Hogan's building, Warren said.

Gary Stark, vice president of ASF Development, who sought the permit, said the 1,506-square-foot structure will be a storage building for contractor's equipment.

The structure was estimated at $6,200.

Warren said the area is zoned B-2 and the building permit requires showing the specifications for construction go beyond what is required by village ordinances.

A six-inch-thick concrete floor will be poured and there will be no plumbing and no heating, she said.

The permit was authorized, pending approval by the building and zoning inspectors.

News in review

News in review provides a summary of some of the past week's stories. This column is designed for out-of-town readers who do not receive the Sunday and Wednesday Press-Record/Journals.

The new year will bring the fulfillment of several promises of development, according to Granite City Mayor Von Dee Cruse. In 1992, he said, Wal Mart will hold the grand opening of its new retail store, the $3 million rehabilitation of the Nameoki area sewer system will be completed, and the new Madison County Transit District downtown bus terminal will be built.

The myth that school crime is largely an urban problem has been "shattered" by a recent statewide survey, according to the Illinois Criminal Justice Information Authority.

In fact, the authority said, suburban high school students and teachers reported more thefts and physical attacks, and more attempts of those crimes, than high school students and teachers in urban, small city or rural areas.

But local school superintendents said the survey is not necessarily an accurate measure of problems here.

Both Superintendent John Rush of Venice District 3 and Superintendent Dan Kostencik of Madison District 12 said they believe they have less school-related crimes than the survey would indicate and attributed the lower figures to the small size of their districts.

Superintendent Gib Wamsley of Granite City District 9 also said he believes the criminal incidents in his district are less than the survey would indicate. He said the lower numbers could be attributed to the district's policy of prosecuting all cases.

Payment of attorney fees again sparked action and reaction at Thursday night's meeting of the Pontoon Beach Village Board.

This time, it was proposed approval of the monthly fee for Village Attorney Keith Jensen that drew a response from Trustee Robert Douglas.

Douglas asked the board to remove Jensen's $359.90 check ($400 less tax) from the monthly bill list being offered for approval. The attorney is paid $400 a month as village attorney, plus fees of $60 an hour for litigation services.

A law providing for "reverse mortgages" for senior citizens is one of many new laws that will go into effect Jan. 1, according to Rep. Sam Wolf, D-Granite City.

Wolf said that, under a reverse mortgage, the senior citizen homeowner uses the equity in his or her home to borrow money from the bank and receive monthly payments for the duration of the reverse mortgage.

The law provides that the mortgage is not due until the senior citizen dies or moves out of the house.

Ticket-writing quotas have some area law enforcement agencies shying away from possible federal grant money for seat belt enforcement.

Department is participating in the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration program, which began this fall, are supposed to issue tickets for not wearing seat belts to between one-third and one-half of motorists they cite for other violations.

St. Clair County Sheriff Merle Justus said his department won't be a part of the program because it appears to set ticket quotas, something in which he said he doesn't believe.

Granite City Police Chief Don Knight agreed quotas are an ugly word — "I didn't like them as a patrolman and I don't like them now" — but said his department is part of the NHTSA program.

back the bonds should the company fail.

She said the agreement obligates the governor, should the company default, to include in the state budget money to repay the bonds.

The state Legislature, however, is under no obligation to actually appropriate the money, Kane said.

"What this does is allow the bonds to get an 'A' rating," Kane said. "That translates into a more favorable interest rate for the company."

The SWIDA board will vote on approval of the moral obligation enhancement in January, Kane said.

State ranks fifth in commodity sales

Area is still 'horseradish capital'

Illinois farms — including a surprising number in predominately urban portions of Madison County — continue to rank high as producers in the country.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture closed the book last month on 1991 and reported that Illinois commodities fetched $7.93 billion, fifth among the 50 states.

And local experts say that corn, wheat and soybeans have put this area on the map in the state agriculture economy.

But horseradish, apples, grain sorghum and honey also boost the market.

More than 1,000 acres of horseradish stretch across the American Bottoms, from the outskirts of Edwardsville to Collinsville, including the Quad City area, said Chris Doll, agriculture adviser in Madison County.

"The Bottoms still claim the title as the horseradish capital of the world," Doll said. "California is the second largest producer with 900 acres."

Thirty-five growers in Madison County shipped $4 million worth of horseradish to 12 states this year, Doll said.

"It'll be an ingredient in holiday menus across the country."

Sweet corn from Madison County goes on dinner tables throughout the Midwest, Doll said. Growers in this county trucked $2 million worth to supermarkets in Illinois and Missouri this summer.

Commercial growers in Madison County picked $1.6 million worth of vegetables this summer on 700 acres, Doll said.

"They sell vegetables at roadside stands and ship it to supermarkets," he said.

Honey is also sticking around the agriculture market in this area.

Beehives in Madison, Jersey, Macoupin and Greene counties produced 760,000 pounds of honey worth $560,000, said Jeff Atkins of the Illinois Agriculture Statistical Service.

"There are 100 beekeepers in Madison County, with about two to three hives each," said Udel Meyer, a Hamlet beekeeper, who has dozens of hives and sells two tons to three tons of honey a year.

"Bees are vital to the farm economy," Meyer said.

"They pollinate thousands of acres of vegetables, apple and peach orchards."

Illinois light rail link under study

With construction of the Metro Link light rail system underway from Lambert Airport to downtown St. Louis, the East West Gateway Coordinating Council has taken the next step towards addressing future public transportation needs of the Metro East.

Vollmer-Oates Inc., a consulting engineering firm with offices in Belleville and Collinsville, will head up a team of experts who will study a key corridor stretching from East St. Louis to Scott Air Force Base.

The project's official title is "Alternative Analysis and Draft Environmental Impact Statement for Major Transit Capital Investments in the St. Clair County Corridor." What that means, said Vollmer-Oates President, David Oates, is that his company's team will collect relevant data, define various transportation alternatives, delineate the engineering needs for each alternative, forecast ridership and prepare a Draft Environmental Impact Statement.

The study will be used by local officials to select a preferred alternative and to evaluate potential means of funding.

"Our central task is to look at the pros and cons of each transit alternative," Oates said. "Starting with a standard 'do-nothing' option, we will examine an improved bus service and/or busways option and the possibility of extending Metro Link eastward from its East St. Louis station. We will look at the three routes already identified for extending Metro Link."

"One of these routes would follow Interstate 64. The other two would follow railroad lines, either the abandoned CSXT railroad line or the active Norfolk and southern railroad line."

The project team recently completed the scoping phase of the study, in which input from local officials, public agencies and the general public was gathered to define the goals and objectives of the study. Definition of the alternatives will be studied and the criteria for judging them is now proceeding. Analysis of the various alternatives and writing the report will take most of 1992.

Vollmer-Oates will present the Draft Environmental Impact Statement in February 1993. A printed product will be presented in a public hearing in March 1993.

Candidates' workshop Monday

Evelyn M. Bowles, Madison County clerk, has announced a candidate workshop will be held Monday, Jan. 6, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Madison County Courthouse (board room, lower level) in Edwardsville.

It will provide candidates, political committees and campaign workers with a wide range of election information for the 1992 campaign.

The workshop, conducted by State Board of Elections officials, will focus on the general primary election to be held March 17.

Board experts will present a complete program of election-related topics and will be available to answer specific questions.

Topics include: campaign finance requirements, voters registration, absentee voting, deputy registrar duties and responsibilities, rights and limitations of poll watchers and proper election day polling place procedures.

The workshop is regarded as essential to candidates and campaign organizers involved in campaigning and fund-raising activities in coming months.

Milton elected zone president

Herbert "Junior" Milton, Madison County Board member for 20 years, has been elected Zone No. 1 president of the Illinois Association of County Board Members.

Milton, who serves as vice chairman of the County Board, said of his election, "It is quite an honor to be elected president of Zone No. 1."

"Of the more than 1,000 representatives statewide, there were only four elected zone presidents and I am proud to be one of those four."

The elected zone officials meet periodically to discuss possible legislation addressing the needs of Illinois counties. Proposed legislation is then passed along to the state association, which seeks consideration by the Legislature.

"Of primary concern at the moment is the practice of the state Legislature to pass bills which affect the citizenry without providing any means for funding these bills," Milton said.

"This forces the county to fund the projects, using funds that are earmarked for other essential services."

Milton, who for three years served as chairman of the Illinois Association of County Boards, was elected at the fall conference of county officials held in Chicago in November.

Newspaper subpoenaed in probe

The St. Clair County State's Attorney's office subpoenaed the Journals Friday in an ongoing grand jury investigation of a physician charged with improper sexual contact with a 15-year-old patient during an exam in March at the Planned Parenthood clinic in Fairview Heights.

The investigation was prompted when the patient alleged that the doctor, then employed at the Fairview Heights clinic, had improper sexual contact with the girl during the exam earlier this year.

The doctor was dismissed shortly after the original allegation was made.

"The grand jury has already heard a lot of evidence in the case," Haida said. "We're hoping they will be finished and make a decision sometime during the month of January."

The case was turned over to the grand jury in November after Fairview Heights police, the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services and the state's attorney's office investigated the matter, said Robert Haida, the county state's attorney.

The subpoena asks the Journals to turn over all printed articles from Jan. 1, 1991, to the present which reported on the doctor's alleged sexual misconduct.

Haida would not comment on the substance of the investigation, how many witnesses were called or any of the evidence being presented. He said the investigation was completed in September, but the case wasn't presented to a grand jury until a new jury was impaneled in November.

The grand jury, which meets every Friday from 9 a.m. to 12 noon, is comprised of 16 members and meets with a quorum of 12 members, Haida said.

By June 30, Planned Parenthood had contacted 33 minor patients between the ages of 13 and 17 who were seen by the doctor earlier in the year.

DCFS had asked the clinic to turn over the names of patients who were seen by the doctor at the clinic, but Planned Parenthood refused to release their names, citing patient confidentiality.

As part of a compromise agreement between DCFS and Planned Parenthood, the clinic contacted the patients to let them know of the investigation and give them the telephone number of a contact person at DCFS if they had information which would aid the investigation.

Drug cooperation needed

It will take the efforts of more than just the police department for the tougher Illinois drug abuse laws to take a bite out of the crime that has infected so much of today's society.

With penalties that call for fines as high as $500,000 and civil as well as criminal liabilities, the laws which were boosted again for 1992 provide plenty of legal deterrents.

But turning the trend against drug abuse is nothing more than a pipe dream unless the new laws get cooperation of judges, police, parents and the community at large. Parents and other influences in the lives of our youths need to stress the potential for penalty to the children who are at risk of joining the drug abuse cycle. A teen-ager can lose driving privileges if convicted of a drug offense in a motor vehicle. Teens cannot hear that tough enforcement of the laws. Comments from area law enforcement officials indicated some disappointment in making arrests and not seeing those charged get stiff penalties from judges.

Police need to expand education programs to include a wider scope of society. Getting parents and the community involved in the Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) program can only help improve that worthwhile effort. Police need to make sure that investigations are meticulous and correct.

Judges need to see those police arrests through. All the new laws in the world will not put a dent in the problem unless the criminals start facing those big fines and prison terms the new laws threaten.

The war against drug abuse can be won, but it will require all those who fight the problem to work together in the battle plan.

Hoping for best as '92 begins

(Carol Clarkin's opinion column appears regularly in the Edwards-Journal.)

It's back again — that time to take a cup o' kindness to the old times, the old friends. And to raise a glass to the new friends and the new year.

Somehow, in view of what has been a remarkably low-key Christmas (by American standards), I doubt that the New Year is going to be ushered in by masses of madcap revelers wearing funny hats, flinging confetti and guzzling champagne in fancy ballrooms.

Too many of us are glad enough to bid the grizzled old year adieu, but are wary of the desperate young'un will be bringing for us. But celebrate, we will. It's tradition — and, perhaps, superstition.

For the umpteenth year, I plan to make no resolutions. It's not that I couldn't use some improvement but I know me all too well. Sloth is my middle name; procrastination-tunate to my character.

My poor mother's favorite preachment was to never put off till tomorrow what can be done today. I've lived by never doing today what can be put off till tomorrow — until I learned that Mark Twain went one better. Twain said "day AFTER tomorrow."

Sure, I'd like to become a lean, mean machine but "lean" is out of the question — laughable, in fact — and I figure I'm already as ornery as anybody can tolerate. I won't strive to be particularly kinder and gentler, even though it would please President Bush. I'm not unkind, but I'm not My friends wouldn't know me.

Rather, if anything, I'd like to be a little tougher, in view of what the future may bring. I don't want to bully little children or push around those older than myself — if there are any such folks. Just tough enough. A week or so back, I asked a friend how he was able to tolerate a certain rather unpopular young man and he told me that, some time ago, he'd prayed for more patience — and he got it — and that was the reason he could put up with the young jerk.

I don't want that kind of patience. Frankly, I prefer to continue to be impatient with that particular brand of stupidity, coarseness and dishonesty.

Like most people, I probably could and should be a better person than I am. But I figure that, by my age, the die is pretty well cast; the mold is set.

Rather like the old Dorothy Parker (though in a somewhat different connotation), "But now I know the things I know, and do the things I do — and if you do not like me so, the hell, my love, with you."

At any rate, those high-minded resolutions would come to naught. I'll be satisfied to make it through yet another year (God willing), keep my head above water, roll with whatever punches fate has in store, and hang on for dear life to those friends who DO "like me so."

We all know that there are two certain things in everyone's life — death and taxes. To that, I think, should be added one more — change.

Nothing in this world is completely static, including the planet on which we live and the universe around it. So, if there's one resolve I might make it would be to remain as flexible to change as possible.

OK, I'm willing to resolve to at least TRY that one. When I raise this year's cup o' kindness, I'll be to friends — old and new and those gone and to the good times past.

And, being a natural-born optimist, to hope that '92 will be a lot better than what's being predicted.

Volunteering throughout the year

(Comment by Illinois Lt. Gov. Bob Kustra)

Each year, thousands of Illinoisans volunteer their time to help others enjoy the holiday season. I've heard dozens of wonderful stories — volunteers helping elderly wrap gifts, record-breaking collections of canned goods for food pantries, offices that donate books for poor children, and many other worthwhile projects.

Many thanks to those of you in Illinois who give your time, talents and money in the spirit of the season. Volunteerism is housed in the office of the lieutenant governor. I know social service agencies are flooded with volunteers and donations during the holidays. But those same agencies must recruit volunteers and solicit funds actively during the remainder of the year.

The challenges that the state and its residents face require that we continue to give the gift of volunteering not only during the holidays, but throughout the entire year.

My wish for 1992 is that the power of giving and volunteerism that arises during the holidays will continue throughout the rest of the year. I encourage all Illinoisans to identify an issue or charitable organization and dedicate their efforts to that cause.

Many communities across the state have "volunteer centers" that can refer people interested in volunteering to organizations that need help.

Or you can contact a social service agency or a religious organization that serves your community. Ask them what they need, share with them what interests you have, and see if there is a match.

Time is a precious commodity these days, and working volunteerism into busy lives can be challenging. Recognizing the need of families to spend time together, many organizations are developing opportunities so that families with children of all ages can volunteer together.

As you make New Year's resolutions for 1992, please consider adding one about serving your community — your neighbors. The gift of volunteerism will keep the spirit of the holiday season with you throughout the year.

Put people to work on infrastructure

(Guest comment by U.S. Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois.)

The item in the Carbondale newspaper, the Southern Illinoisian, perhaps was just another story to most readers, but it also provided insight into a national problem.

The report, written by Phil Brinkman, states: "A St. Louis man, despondent over the economy and his inability to find a job, committed suicide Tuesday at a picnic area in Rend Lake State Park."

Donald Lee Belford, 48, a U.S. Air Force veteran and a real estate broker, ran a hose from his exhaust pipe to the trunk of his car, killing himself.

The stories about unemployment are not just statistics. They are about real people, sometimes overwhelmed by the problems they face.

"I'm willing to do anything" is a phrase I hear over and over from desperate men and women out of work. All of this underscores the short-term need to develop some more-adequate system of unemployment compensation for those who are out of work.

Only one third of the nation's unemployed have any income from unemployment compensation.

But we also ought to take a more fundamental long-term look.

We have these needs:

- Jobs.
- Welfare reform.
- A host of road, bridge and community needs.

We ought to show the good sense to mesh these three needs.

A bill I have introduced moves us in that direction. But, I have to add, the chance of its immediate passage is almost nil.

We still do not see the jobs/welfare/community-needs trio as pressing national problems. Yes, they would be nice to solve, but there is no sense of urgency.

And there should be. Ask Donald Lee Belford's family.

Millions of Americans are non-productive. That is a national economic need as well as a human tragedy.

Millions of Americans on welfare who would like to be working are barely eking out an existence as well as a human tragedy.

Roads need repairs, sewer systems must be built, parks need restoration, illiterate adults need tutoring, houses should be built — and a host of other things could be done by people who are now unemployed.

These are local and national economic needs and failing to meet them often is a human tragedy.

If, instead of paying people on welfare to be non-productive, we were to create job opportunities and meet the nation's needs, everyone would benefit.

That would be particularly true if we screened people as they applied for some of these jobs.

If they cannot read and write, get them into a class; if they have no marketable skill, get them into a program to acquire one.

Every problem is also an opportunity.

Our opportunity is to put people to work, give them pride, and make the nation a finer place.

Desperate people are in almost every community of the nation. We need to give them hope and give the nation hope.

Letters

Questions seat belt law arrests

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing this letter in response to the news story carried in the Dec. 18 Journal. This particular story concerns the seat belt enforcement crackdown by the Granite City Police.

I have nothing against laws that protect the public from the misdeeds of others, but I do have a problem with laws designed to protect us from ourselves.

When this country was founded it was predicated on the premise that each of us has a right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Under our Constitution, we are charged with the responsibility for our own welfare — this is what a free society is all about. We are also guaranteed that we will be free from unreasonable searches and seizures, so that we can be secure in our person and in our effects.

There is one more right that we have. It is not explicitly contained in the Constitution but has been in a case such as this. That is the right of the citizen to be left alone.

What is our country coming to, when we allow — and even condone — the totalitarian tactic of witch hunting for "law breakers" in the name of safety?

I seem to remember that, when this "law" was passed, it was stated that only people who were involved in some other traffic violation stop would be examined and cited for violating this law. Now we have regressions from drunk driving roadblocks to "seat belt roadblocks."

This next portion of my letter is addressed to our esteemed chief of police and to our mayor: Gentlemen, I fail to see the validity of this idiotic witch hunt for violators of a law that has no impact on anyone other than the occupant of the vehicle in question.

The fact that you have "identified" other violators of laws and arrested them is a poor excuse for wasting manpower, funds and personnel and hassling the motoring public in general for such a flimsy law.

The officers' time would be better spent, and we would gain much more in safety, if — instead of looking for seat belt scofflaws — they would act as crossing guards at our schools.

I'm impressed by the "61 arrests." It's nice to know that the motoring public can count on the Granite City Police to protect us from ourselves.

I sincerely hope that each one arrested secures the services of a good attorney. It could be interesting.

I remember talking with a friend of mine who is the sheriff of one of our surrounding counties. I asked him at one time if he was going to devote manpower to the impending (at that time) state police speeding crackdown.

His reply to me was very illuminating — and possibly illustrative of our present situation here in Granite City.

He said, "I don't have the manpower available for that. We have much more important things that need to be done."

Enough.

Diseases vie for Owner 'bails out' 2 captured cats

TO THE EDITOR:

The last place our society needs to play politics is in the lives of individuals.

Yet, at the expense of you, your family and friends, Congress has bowed to extreme political pressure seeking preferential treatment in medical research dollars. Don't get me wrong. People with AIDS deserve our compassion.

Moreover, I'm saddened that a super athlete like Magic Johnson contracted the virus. But let's face reality, folks — they do not deserve favored-disease status.

The Congressional Research Service from the Library of Congress proves that a disproportionate amount of funds is given to AIDS in comparison with other deadly diseases.

AIDS receives $1.95 billion for research and prevention, with deaths between 37,000 and 45,000 per year.

The only other disease that comes close to those dollar levels is cancer, but it receives only 93 percent of the money AIDS receives. Yet cancer kills 500,000 more people every year.

Heart disease, which costs 20 times more lives than AIDS, reaps 38 percent of the money. Alzheimer's claims 2½ more times the deaths of AIDS and about less than 12 percent of research and prevention money.

Finally, diabetes, which claims about the same number of lives as AIDS per year, not counting the complications which lead to blindness, kidney loss, amputation, and nerve damage receives 85 percent less for research.

Where is the justice? If the United States is really interested in reducing AIDS, changing the behavior of homosexuals and drug users is a must.

The billions spent on AIDS research will not stop a disease caused by a behavior problem.

"Safe sex" is not the answer, either — it is a misnomer. It can not, and will not, stop AIDS.

People must change their behavior if they wish to control the spread of AIDS until a cure is found. I encourage each one of you to call or write your congressman and senators to change their attitude and provide more research money for non-behavior-related diseases such as cancer, heart disease, diabetes and Alzheimer's.

You can make a difference.

Owner 'bails out' 2 captured cats

TO THE EDITOR:

Friday, Dec. 18, was a sad and unlucky day. I was missing my white Himalayan cat for a week.

I was very concerned and had been searching the neighborhood and also making phone calls seeking news.

Then my Tabby cat turned up missing for three days.

I decided to check with the Nameoki Township dogcatcher to see if they might have picked them up, but the dogcatcher was out.

The dispatcher at the Town Hall gave me the number of the Madison County Animal Control Department. A phone call there proved they had the Himalayan cat. However, they did not think they had the Tabby.

They advised that I could have my Himalayan cat back by paying the adoption fee of $20.

I also found my Tabby cat there; it had been scheduled to be put to sleep. It cost $30 to get back my Tabby. I was not aware that cats are kept for only three days.

My trouble and expense are thanks to a neighbor who got a trap from the Humane Society and set it when they were into his yard. He could have been kinder if he would have let me know he objected to the cats being on his property.

Also, I found that the Himalayan cat had been abused by someone who poked two holes in her stomach with a sharp object.

There is no leash law for cats but Rabies Control billed by the high fee of $30 for me to get back my Tabby.

I hope other cat owners will learn from my experience and avoid problems with kind neighbors and Rabies Control.

Refinancing, combining can benefit student loans

By Kathy Kristof

If you ran up significant debts while paying for your college education, now may be the time to consider refinancing or consolidating your guaranteed student loans.

Unless you think loan rates are likely to go lower, the advantages can be substantial. What are they? You may be able to lock in a reasonably low rate, reduce the number of checks you write each month and, if needed, extend repayment terms to lower your monthly outlay.

There generally are no fees associated with a loan consolidation. Refinancing a student loan, a separate proposition, can cost a maximum of $100 per loan. But some lenders, including Citibank in New York, waive fees on refinances, too. (Not all student loan lenders do refinances, but most have consolidation programs.)

The disadvantage of a refinancing or consolidation usually falls down to convenience. You have to get the loan forms and fill them out. Although your banker is required to let you know about the federal student loan consolidation and refinancing programs available, not everyone knows about them. Frankly, that's because they don't make much money on such deals.

Of course, some may have loans at such low rates that a consolidation or refinancing would not benefit, industry experts say. But anyone with student loans at rates above 9 percent should consider it.

One qualification: You must owe at least $5,000 to qualify for federal loan consolidation programs. And some lenders, such as San Francisco-based BankAmerica, won't consolidate less than $10,000 in loans.

Current interest rates are what make consolidations and refinances such good deals now. Some student loan rates are at their lowest levels in five years.

That helps those who have old fixed-rate loans in the 12- to 14 percent range, because they can refinance for variable rates, which currently are around 9.5 percent.

It is, of course, possible that the interest rate on a variable rate loan will rise. So-called SLS and PLUS loans are "re-priced" once annually at the 91-day Treasury bill rate plus 3.25 percentage points. However, rates on these loans are capped at 12 percent. In other words, if your old loan cost 12 percent or more, you can't lose with a refinancing.

Meanwhile, it also may make sense to consolidate your loans now, said Elizabeth Ende, director of product management for Washington, D.C.-based Student Loan Marketing Association, better known as Sallie Mae. Theoretically, consolidation will not lower your total interest rate. But it will convert variable-rate SLS and PLUS loans into one fixed-rate loan at a time when rates are most favorable.

Here's how it works: If you want to consolidate, contact your lender and get the appropriate forms. The forms will ask which loans you would like to consolidate, their interest rate and so on. Then a processing center will determine what the new rate on your consolidated loan will be. You do not need to consolidate every one of your student loans, rounded to the nearest dollar. You probably will be asked why. The agency that guarantees these loans wants to make sure you haven't just forgotten about some of your debts.

Generally speaking, your new loan rate will be a weighted average of the rates you were paying on the to-be-consolidated loans, rounded to the nearest cent. On other words, if the weighted average rate is 9.34 percent, you'd get a 9.34 percent rate on your consolidated loan; if the average was 9.56 percent, the rate would bump up to 10 percent.

For the consolidated loan, the rate cannot be less than 9 percent or more than 12 percent.

Rates on consolidated loans are fixed, so there is no risk that they'll rise later. And that helps those who have SLS or PLUS loans, which offer floating rates, that have historically averaged well above 10 percent. And it can help those with Stafford loans, which start out at an 8 percent rate, but kick up to 10 percent after four years.

If the bulk of your loans are in heavily subsidized plans, such as the Perkins loan program which offers a 5 percent fixed rate, consolidation may not make sense. Or you may choose to stretch those low-rate loans from a consolidation.

If you consolidate your loans, you often get the choice to stretch your payments out over a longer term. The amount of time you can take to pay will depend on how much you borrowed—the bigger the debt, the more time they'll give you to pay. Unless you're facing a squeeze, experts don't advise lengthening the term. Their argument is purely financial: If you lengthen the term, you pay more because you are indebted longer.

It will begin again May 11 coinciding with the spring tourist season. The route connects St. Louis Union Station, St. Louis Centre, Laclede's Landing, the Riverfront, the Gateway Arch, Busch Stadium and many hotels and parking lots.

Happy New Year!

Backward or forward, 1991 a sports year of near-misses

By Dave Whaley
Staff writer

1991. It's the century's only palindromic year. But no matter how you look at it, backward or forward — it was a sports year filled with near-misses in the Tri-Cities. That's not to say our area athletes didn't accomplish anything. In fact, they accomplished plenty.

But in the end, they came away with not quite as much as they hoped.

Exceptions included the American Legion Post 113 Junior Triplets. Greg Patton and Doug Winfield started the program this summer and it didn't end until Aug. 4 in Independence, Mo., after league and state championships had been won. Madison High School sophomore Yuketha Gardner also won the girls state Class A title in the 100 meters in May.

The Post 113 seniors had a fabulous season, winning the District 22 championship and the Fifth Division title before taking second in the state tournament in Galesburg. The Granite City High School girls soccer team was the only other local team to advance to the state tournament, where they placed fourth.

Jenny Baker and Dan Brazee of Granite City placed second in the state in diving and the high jump, respectively. Also enjoying great seasons, but coming up just a little shy of their goals were the Madison High School basketball team, and the Warrior football and boys soccer teams.

Here's a capsule look at some of the moments:

Jan. 22: In a battle of future college teammates, Eric Claggett of Venice outduels Julian Winfield of Cardinal Ritter 23-14 as the Red Devils beat the Lions 74-62. Claggett and Winfield are now freshmen starters at St. Louis University.

Feb. 9: Pat Scheffer, Ryan King, Chris Hoffstot and Jerry Heubachman of Granite City qualify for the state wrestling tournament with sectional victories.

Feb. 16: Scheffer is the only one of the four to win a match at state, but the experience is well worth it. All four wrestlers are back this year, and the Warriors are the best team in the area and should be among the best in the state by post-season time.

Feb. 22: It's the night for which Madison High School basketball fans have waited six years. The Trojans beat Venice 72-61 in the Dupro Regional final. Though Madison had beaten the Devils on Dec. 18, 1990, this was the one that mattered. It had been six years since Madison had won a regional, and they hadn't beaten their archrivals once in that time.

"It felt good," said senior Antonio Smith, who led the way with 19 points. "This was like the old Trojans. The seniors were getting tired of losing to Venice in the regional every year."

Feb. 26: The Warriors win their first post-season basketball game in five years with a 71-55 win over Wood River as Jeff Smith scores 25 points and adds 10 rebounds.

It was a summer of celebration for the Triplets (left to right, Erik Lewis, Drake Marshall and manager Ralph Burnett).

March 1: Andre Mays scores 30 points and Wesclin misses a three-pointer at the buzzer as the Trojans win the Vandalia Sectional, 63-60. But the Warrior season ends in a 75-65 loss to Civic Memorial.

March 3: The Trojans take an early 19-point lead over Effingham St. Anthony in the Charleston Super-Sectional. A trip to the state finals appears inevitable. But Madison abandons its running game and the Bulldogs creep back into it.

Tony Bryant scores 31 points, including a three-pointer with five seconds left in regulation time for a 76-76 tie. Brian Schulz hits two free throws late in overtime to secure an 82-81 win and send the Trojans home in heart-breaking fashion.

April 2: The Lady Warrior soccer team beats Collinsville 1-0 on Addie Lenzi's goal. It's an early showdown between the two teams who figure to battle for a state final berth.

April 20: Sophomore Brent Dippel throws a two-hitter for the Warrior baseball team against the defending state champion Edwardsville Tigers. Dippel allows only one run as the Tigers try to keep their 40-game winning streak alive.

Unfortunately for Dippel and the Warriors, Tiger senior Joe Blasینگ is just a little better. He throws a no-hitter and Edwardsville wins 1-0 to win the state.

Tim Henson was an all-star, but the state title went to Collinsville.

Granite City Round Robin Tournament.

April 26: Beth Rapoff and Amanda Witter score as the Lady Warriors knock off previously unbeaten and top-ranked Incatene Word 2-1 at Memorial Stadium. Granite City is 10-1 and has won six in a row.

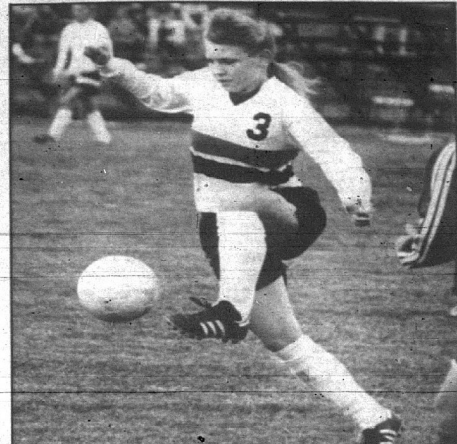

The same day, Warrior baseball coach Bob Stigemeier wins his 300th career game in a 10-0 win at Jerseyville behind a four-hit shutout by Chris Hill.

May 14: Coming from nowhere, the Warrior baseball team gets a share of the conference title with a 13-0 win over Collinsville.

May 18: John Moad goes 10 for 23 in regional action as the SIUE Cougars advance to the NCAA Division II World Series in Montgomery, Ala. Moad is the regional MVP. He joins GCHS teammates Tim Hogan, Jamie Hogan, and Darin Hendrickson in leading the Cougars to a 42-15 season.

The same day, Gardner wins the girls Class A 100 meter dash with a time of 12.4. She places third in the 200 meters with a time of 25.6 — a school record. Madison finishes 10th as a team.

May 23: Brazee gives it his best shot, high jumping 7-0 in the state finals in Charleston. But Marion's Cameron Wright clears 7-1 and Brazee has to settle for second place in his senior year. Brazee and Wright are Amanda Witter scored 19 goals and set two state tournament records as the Lady Warriors finished fourth.

now teammates at SIU-Carbondale.

May 28: Shawn Odom wasn't even on the Lady Warrior varsity when the season began. But she's in the right spot with a sudden death overtime goal as Granite City beats Springfield 1-0 to advance to its first state tournament.

May 31: Witter becomes the first player ever to score a hat trick in the Illinois girls state soccer finals as the Lady Warriors beat Downers Grove South 4-1 in the quarterfinals in Naperville.

June 1: The dream ends with a 3-0 loss to Warburg Valley, but Witter sets another state tournament record later in the day with her fourth goal of the finals in a 2-1 loss to Schaumburg. Granite City finishes fourth in the state, but registers its first 20-win season (30-4).

With a bevy of talented juniors and Witter now a senior, the Lady Warriors will go into the 1992 season as one of the favorites to win it all.

June 26: The Triplets beat Edwardsville 2-1 as Drake Marshall is the winning pitcher and drives in both runs. Post 113 gets ready before the game by taking "ghost" infield practice.

July 16: The Triplets, who will go undefeated throughout July, finish the District 22 regular season with a 17-2 record after Brian Harshany overpowers Edwardsville with 13 strikeouts in an 8-2 win.

July 21: The Junior Triplets win the District 22 Junior Legion finals with a 12-2 win over O'Fallon. Jeff Ridenour and Brent Dippel hit home runs to pace a 12-2 attack, and Ben Hicks is the winning pitcher.

July 28: Championship Sunday. The Juniors win the state title with a 7-2 win over Joliet in Springfield. Hicks again is the winning pitcher. Meanwhile, the Triplets are taking care of business at Varsity Field. They score five runs in the first inning and blast Belleville 11-2 to win the District 22 title.

July 30: Harshany is named the District 22 MVP — the third Triplets in four years to get that honor.

Aug. 4: While the Junior Triplets settle for second in regional play in Independence, the seniors are going through Fairfield like Sherman went through Atlanta. They score 85 runs in four games, with 68 hits and 12 home runs in winning the Fifth Division crown. The finale is a 26-0 win over Olney as Erik Lewis hits two home runs and drives in five.

Aug. 11: Marshall's fly ball falls about 10 feet short of the left field fence for the final out as the Triplets lose 4-3 to Barrington in the state finals in Galesburg. Post 113 finishes the season 28-6.

"Outside of my family, this group of guys means more to me than anything," says manager Ralph Burnett.

He means it.

Sept. 6: The Warrior football team opens the season with a 32-0 win at Cahokia. This team might not be too bad.

Sept. 10: The Warrior soccer team beats CBC 2-1 in overtime on Josh Neidhart's goal. All-state goalie Tim Henson moves forward in the closing moments of regulation time and ties the game on a penalty kick.

Oct. 4: East St. Louis beats the Warriors 31-19 at Clyde Jordan Stadium, but Granite City shows everyone how good team it has. They battle back from a 25-6 deficit in the fourth quarter to give the Flyers a big scare.

Oct. 18: The Warriors bury all doubts with a convincing 23-7 win at St. Louis U. High. The Junior Bills were undefeated and eventually finish second in the Missouri state playoffs.

Nov. 1: Granite City completes an 8-1 regular season by coming back for a 21-17 win over Belleville East on Friday night at Memorial Stadium. It denies East a playoff spot, just as the Lancers had done for the Warriors a year ago.

Nov. 5: Granite City native Matt Chandler scores in sudden death overtime to give the Collinsville Hawks a 1-0 win over the Warriors in the Collinsville Sectional final. It's a crushing end for Gene Baker's team, although Henson is all-state again, along with Jason Maxwell.

Nov. 6: Expecting to play Pekin or Moline, the Warrior football team instead is paired with East St. Louis in the first round of the playoffs. Granite City tries its best, but the Flyers are too strong with a punishing defense and the running of Chris Moore. He gets 22 yards and East St. wins, 26-6.

Nov. 21: Jenny Baker of Granite City wins the state diving title. No, wait, she's second. Baker, who placed seventh as a sophomore and third in 1990, thinks for a few minutes she has upset Rockford Auburn's Carrie Zarse in the finals at New Trier High School.

But a computer error is corrected and Baker is second by a point and a half. She's still the fan favorite and helped to break up the northern Illinois monopoly of the swimming and diving finals for each of her four years.

Dec. 7: Chicago King buries the Warrior basketball team 91-46 in the Granite City Superfests Shootout. But the Lady Warriors and the Red Devils are winners as 1,400 fans file into Memorial Gymnasium.

Dec. 28: The state wrestling team, off to an 8-0 start, wins the Granite City Holiday Tournament for the first time in six years. Scheffer, King and Jerry Heubachman win individual titles.

Jenny Baker had the state diving title for a few minutes until a computer error was discovered.

Red Devils rally to take 3rd place

By Dave Whaley
Staff writer

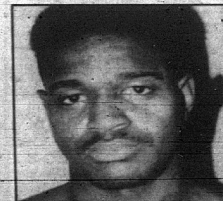

Everyone is in agreement that the Red Devils don't look like the Venice teams of the past. But how many teams would like to be 8-37?

That's where the Devils stand heading into the new year after a 49-42 win over Greenville on Monday in the third place game of the Columbia Holiday Tournament. Marcus Franklin scored 17 points, including a three-point play which gave Venice the lead for good with 2:04 left.

"We're still winning ugly," said coach Clinton Harris. "These guys still have to realize their potential."

One good sign that came out of Monday's game was that the Devils were able to come back in the second half without much offense from Franklin. The 6-6 center has often been virtually the whole show on offense this year. But his winning three-point play was the only offense he managed in the second half.

Senior guard Marcus Anderson got all 10 of his points in the second half, including six big free throws down the stretch.

Marcus Anderson ... big free throws

Johnathan Love also came through with six steals as Venice limited the Comets to only 14 points in the second half.

"We changed to a zone defense and made them hit outside shots," said Harris.

Greenville couldn't do much of that. They shot only 37 percent on the night. Cole Johnson, a 6-5 senior, led them with 13 points, but no one else was in double figures.

Actually, Venice made only 7 of 20 free throws, but that was after they missed their first seven. Chad Ambush's three-point play gave Greenville a 31-24 lead in the third quarter, but the Devils clamped down on defense and worked back into it. Anderson made two free throws with 1:28 left for a 44-40 lead.

Anderson and Franklin then made steals at the other end as the Comets never even got off a tying shot attempt.

"Johnathan really picked up the defense in the second half and made some steals," said Harris. "We're 8-3 without our leading returning scorer (Ivan Johnson). He'll be back in two weeks, but he won't be handling the ball. Our guards still have to step forward and be leaders."

Venice lost 75-54 to Freeburg in Saturday's semifinal. But the Midgets shot 25 free throws to out six for the Devils. Franklin had 17 points to lead Venice.

Marcus Franklin comes down with one of his 15 rebounds Monday.

Beausoleil will perform Jan. 17 in St. Louis.

Doucet's Beausoleil helps Cajun music gain audience

By Alan Sculley
Correspondent

Fiddle player Michael Doucet remembers the image he had of Cajun music while growing up in Scott, La., near Lafayette during the 1960s.

"As far as I could remember, it was always music for old people—it was always the older people who played it," said Doucet, the founding member of Beausoleil, today's premier Cajun band.

Beausoleil will perform Jan. 17 at the Sheldon Concert Hall and Ballroom. Tickets are $12 in advance, $14 day of show.

His impression of Cajun music weren't unusual. Throughout the 1960s and '70s, Louisiana was rushing headlong into Americanization, and the region's French culture was heading for extinction in the process.

Though Doucet, 40, grew up hearing French songs, several family members as well as friends played the music at informal get-togethers—it wasn't until the early 1970s while he was attending Louisiana State University that his interest in the music became a passion.

Just for fun, he took a course in folk music.

"The teacher, I asked him about French music, and he said, 'Oh that's just translated English songs,'" Doucet said. "I knew better than that, and I'm sure he did, too. But he didn't want to get into it. So I got into it."

Thus began Doucet's journey into Cajun music. Now 20 years later, he can be credited with playing a major role not only in reviving the native French music in his home state but also in helping the music gain unprecedented recognition and popularity worldwide.

At LSU, Doucet began researching the history of the music. Just as importantly, he sought out veteran musicians who played the music.

One of Doucet's main inspirations was Dennis McGee, a fiddle player whose recordings dated to the 1920s.

"He'd been playing for something like 50 years before I met him," Doucet said. "And what his music did to me, it made me completely relearn Cajun music because it was different. I realized then that what people were playing—the music I had learned—was more of a modern music, maybe the music of the '50s and '60s."

Doucet said fiddle players who had been early imitators, such as Doc Guidry and Rufus Thibodeaux, played in an accordion-influenced, country swing style. McGee's approach was very different.

"Dennis, his music totally predated the accordion as far as influences on the music (are concerned)," Doucet said. "So I had to almost completely relearn every song I knew, which was really a lot of fun."

"We spent a lot of time together," he said. "And it was not only just music, but as a person he was indeed a sage, a wealth of what had happened, a chronicle of history and traditions that had come before and different styles. He could remember those things."

All the time he was learning about his native music, Doucet was also playing, updating the music in the process.

Beausoleil was formed as a trio in the mid 1970s by Doucet, Doucet's brother, Bessy Duhon, and mandolin player, Kenneth Richard. Doucet and Duhon also fronted an electric Cajun rock band called Beausoleil that played frequently during this period before splitting in 1977.

The original Beausoleil lineup wasn't together long. By the early 1980s, Duhon and Richard had left, and three members who remain with the band today, guitarist David Doucet and percussionist Billy Ware and Tommy Alest, had joined Jimmy Breaux, the latest of several musicians to fill the accordion slot, bassist Tommy Comeaux and banjo player Al Thury complete the current lineup.

Since 1976, the band has released a string of acclaimed albums on the small independent Arhoolie and Rounder labels, including the Grammy-nominated "Gris-Gris" in 1986 and "Bayou Cadillac" in 1989.

The 1990s have begun with Beausoleil stepping up to the larger Rhino Records, a move which should raise the band's visibility. "The Rhino debut, 'Cajun Conja,' has been on the world music charts for more than 20 weeks."

Doucet said the reasons for joining Rhino were quite practical.

"I was getting tired of people calling me up saying, 'I can't find your records,'" he said. "And that's really the heart-break of any musician. You do this work and you put it out, and one thing you want is to be accessible to people."

Doucet said that as an ensemble, Beausoleil shares the kind of musical "communication" that only veteran groups can achieve.

"We never practice—we basically just learn stuff on the mandolin," he said. "And it's so good now that you just get a feeling the first time (a song is played) and you kind of work it out. So I think it's great."

New concert bookings include: "MC 900 Foot Jesus, Jan. 17, at Mississippi Nights. Tickets $10 in advance, $12 day of show."

"Three Mery Widows, Jan. 23, Mississippi Nights, $5 cover."

"Eric Martenhal, Jan. 26, Mississippi Nights, $10 advance, $12 day of show."

'Bugsy' Levinson, Beatty make deadly underworld hit

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

The prerelease gossip about "Bugsy," directed by the prolific filmmaker Barry Levinson and starring the popular Warren Beatty, wasn't positive.

The finished product, however, proves the gossip wrong.

This crafty film is a vigorous slice of gangland life. However, it's true that it is less about violence than it is about the vaulted essence of the man it chronicles, Benjamin Hymie Siegel, organized crime's most romanticized hero. "Bugsy" is a smart looking 1940s period piece about a mesmerizing tough guy whose visionary talents and ambition were accented by ferocious outbursts of murderous violence.

Beatty is the perfect actor to play Ben Siegel, better known as Bugsy, a nickname he abhorred that was given to him by the press. Bugsy was a suave, handsome hood who got sent to the west coast by his east coast underworld colleagues. They included Meyer Lansky, played by Ben Kingsley, and Charlie Luciano, played by Bill Graham, who passed away before this picture opened. Harvey Keitel appears as the vicious killer Mickey Cohen.

Bugsy's mission was to beef up the profitability of the mob's racketeering. He is greeted at Union Station in Los Angeles by his childhood friend from Brooklyn, actor George Raft, played by Joe Mantegna.

Bugsy takes Hollywood by

storm. He hypes his dapper, sportsman's image to the hilt. He even has visions of his prowess as an actor and arranges for his own screen test.

Bugsy's roguish manner and slick good looks fit right into the glitz and glamour of Tinseltown. Even though he has a wife and two daughters back East, Bugsy becomes infatuated with a beautiful, second-billing actress named Virginia Hill, played by Annette Bening. Hill's lust for power is almost as great as Bugsy's. She grabs for him fast. He thinks her forwardness and hair-trigger anger are very appealing, even humorous.

The major element in the script of "Bugsy" is about the ambitious gangster's dream of building a show place mecca in the midst of the Nevada desert—a place that would give the underworld a political base in that part of the country, as well as providing a safe haven where the mob could cater to every entertainment whim a customer would demand, legal or otherwise.

Bugsy's first resort for the area, the Flamingo Hotel, was so-called because it was Siegel's nickname for Hill. Bugsy's mob pals overlooked his millions of dollars in cost overruns on the resort, some of which were piled up because of his interest in pleasing Hill.

But when the grand opening hoopla had come and past, and the Flamingo looked like a flop, Bugsy's fortunes took a deadly turn, even though history has shown that his visions of Las Vegas were anything but foolhardy.

"Bugsy" is biographically accurate in its depiction of Siegel, his lifestyle and his magnetic personality. The entire cast is splendid, but it is Beatty who makes this film explode with the legend of a man who to this day remains a crimson hero of yesterday's crime lore.

An Academy Award nomination for Beatty for Best Actor would not be out of order.

Other Levinson successes include "Good Morning, Vietnam," "Rain Man" and "Avalon."

"Rated R (violence, language, sexual suggestiveness). Running time: 135 minutes."

Versatile Klaus Kinski left rich legacy on film

By Mason Wiley
Correspondent

In addition to giving us his lovely daughter Nastassia, Klaus Kinski (1926-91) left a portfolio of worthy films that range from a devilishly Duval fairy tale to a Billy Wilder romp to a number of Werner Herzog melodramas.

Tying into the current fanfare over Disney's latest cartoon is the "Beauty and the Beast" episode of Duval's popular storybook series, "Fairy Tale Theater" (1983, Fox Video, $14.98) in which Kinski co-stars with Susan Sarandon as the Beast. Roger Vadim, best known for introducing Brigitte Bardot to audiences, as well as for featuring his then-wife, Jane Fonda, in "Barbarella" (1968).

But nobody's clothes come off in this children's tale. Just Klaus' beast makeup at the end.

Billy Wilder cast Kinski as a sex therapist who makes off with Jack Lemmon's wife, Paula Prentiss, in the farce "Buddy Buddy" (1981, MGM/UA, $79.95). Lemmon's character becomes suicidal and keeps inadvertently stumbling into the path of hard-boiled hitman Walter Matthau. Laughs ensue.

With director Werner Herzog, Kinski made a quartet of films in the country where he grew up, Germany. In their first outing together, "Woyzeck" (1978, New Yorker Films, $59.95), Kinski has a Shakespearean-sized role in the director's tragedy of an army private who cracks up.

Herzog liked his characters mad and twice sent Kinski schlepping around in Amazonian jungles playing deluded dreamers. In "Aguirre, the Wrath of God" (1972, New Yorker Films, $59.95), Kinski plays a Spanish conquistador who splits from Pizarro's 1560 tour of South America to find the fabled El Dorado, the city of gold. Guess what? He never finds it, but he loses most of the members of his expedition, as well as his mind, along the way. A scene of a raftload of explorers caught in the rapids is mesmerizing.

Director and star were back on location in the Amazon for "Fitzcarraldo" (1982, Warner, $69.95), the story of an Irish soldier of fortune who tries to haul a steamship over a mountain in search of water routes. Herzog himself did basically the same thing making the film.

Sally Field and Kevin Kline star in "Soapdish," a comedy about the off-camera lives of the cast and crew of a soap opera. The film has just been released on video.

laboration is a good old-fashioned monster movie. In this case, a remake of an old Dracula flick, F.W. Murnau's "Nosferatu" (1922). The remake, "Nosferatu: The Vampire" (1979, Republic, $19.98), puts Kinski in similar ghoul makeup and allows him to dine on the neck of Isabelle Adjani. Kinski stars in another movie about the blood-sucker, "Count Dracula" (1971, Republic, $14.98), but in this ground the title role is played by Christopher Lee, and Kinski plays Renfield, his sniveling factotum.

With his bulging eyes, Kinski was a natural for sci-fi movies. In the American TV movie "Timeslapper" (1987, Fries Home Video, $39.95), William Devane plays a professor who travels back in time to aid a woman from the future, portrayed by Lauren Hutton. Kinski plays the bad guy Hutton is after, a man who betrayed her father.

"Endroid" (1982, Media Home Entertainment, $49.95) features Kinski as a mad scientist on a remote space station who decides to terminate his creation, our hero—a robot.

Kinski is one of the bad guys whom Clint Eastwood and Lee Van Cleef track down in "For a Few Dollars More" (1965, MGM/UA, $19.98), a Sergio Leone spaghetti Western served with a heavy dose of Ennio Morricone's music. In one memorable scene, Van Cleef uses the back of Kinski's neck as a matchbook.

Stud says child care problems low-paying jobs promote welfare

Most women on welfare want to lead self-reliant, independent lives, but find themselves "trapped in a debilitating circle" of unreliable child care arrangements, low-paying jobs, and changing work hours.

A study, sponsored by the Illinois Department of Public Aid, reached those conclusions based on responses from 3,000 current and former recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), 480 day-care providers and 70 advocates and government officials.

The overwhelming majority of AFDC recipients want to lead self-reliant, independent lives, but find themselves "trapped in a debilitating circle" of unreliable child care arrangements, low-paying jobs, and changing work hours.

The study, done by the Institute of Applied Research of St. Louis, "Most would prefer to work, if they had the opportunity."

Child care difficulties, however, are among the "powerful incentives" to finding and retaining employment or beginning and staying in school, researchers said.

Of the AFDC clients surveyed, 42 percent said child-care problems prevented them from working full-time; 39 percent said child-care problems prevented them from going to school, and 30 percent said they returned to AFDC within a year because of child-care difficulties.

The difficulties involved the cost of care, geographic accessibility, availability, reliability and quality of care.

Despite the difficulties, more than 75 percent of parents attended school, worked or did both. Many mothers had a full-time or two jobs and still had earnings below the poverty level.

"A woman with two children working full-time and year-round at a job that pays at or slightly above the minimum wage cannot earn enough to keep her family above the official poverty line," researchers noted. The poverty level for a family of three is $11,140.

The study added: "AFDC participants are often trapped in a debilitating circle moving between the type of work they can get and the type of child care they can afford and must rely on."

Low-paying jobs, part-time jobs and jobs with changing work schedules — often involving evening hours and weekends — are the typical kinds of employment available to women on welfare.

Researchers said, "This type of work requires the least expensive and most flexible kind of child care and naturally leads to greater reliance on home and relative care."

These informal arrangements can often be unreliable and lead to frequent changes in child care providers, thereby limiting the kinds of work that welfare mothers can accept. Those relying on child care reported more work and school problems because of the arrangements than those using child-care centers.

The researchers found that women who participated in IDPA's transitional child-care program considered it critical to keeping their jobs after leaving welfare.

Since 1968, IDPA has provided transitional child care for clients who've found jobs and no longer qualify for AFDC. Child-care support is available for up to 12 months after leaving welfare.

The report concluded, "There is a need both to expand eligibility to a wider set of families and to extend assistance longer than it is currently available. New federal assistance programs and state actions are the agency (IDPA) can and should take separately and in coordination with other agencies and programs."

Among the recommendations: — Promote full-day services in child care centers and in school day care programs for children whose parents work or attend school. IDPA, the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services support 15 such programs around the state.

Promote high school-based child-care programs, particularly in low-income, high AFDC areas.

Reemphasize and explain child care information to women on welfare. Distribute pamphlets, flyers, posters and a video explaining child-care options are being distributed to local public aid offices in the state.
